Organization’s Mission Statement:
        Global Growers Network is a 501c3 nonprofit organization that connects international farmers who now live in Georgia to agriculture, by growing good food, training farmers, and creating economic opportunities.

Summary of organization’s primary programs and services:
        GGN works primarily with metro-Atlanta's refugee community, made up of people who have been forced to flee their home countries due to war, genocide and persecution. Many were farmers back home. We currently work with about 250 families representing 15 culture groups from around the world. They grow fresh and culturally appropriate foods to feed their families and communities, to earn supplemental income, and to prepare for careers as independent farmers. We offer land and agricultural support to develop hands-on production skills relevant to farming in the Southeast United States. Our Farm School features training in agricultural production, business and marketing, and food safety. Our approach is very collaborative and partnerships with local organizations are key to our success.

See above. Very limited accessibility.
