ABOUT THE PROGRAM

The EASL Forum is an interdisciplinary group of scholars who meet weekly in collaborative 90 minute sessions focused on pressing social issues, leadership development, and community engagement. The Forum consists of 10 to 15 students who learn and serve together over the course of 22 weeks from September to April. The shared journey focuses on four areas: integrity, personal growth, bridge building, and community engagement.

In the spring semester, Forum students will put into action the concepts they developed during the year, working in small groups to plan and deliver a project to enhance the Emory or local community. This project will be hands-on and will address a need or problem and will result in a tangible, sustainable solution. Forum students will present on their projects at our closing celebration at the end of spring semester.

AKOSUA BAAH

Year: Freshman

School: Emory College

Major(s): Chemistry & Political Science

Email: akosua.baah@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

My name is Akosua Baah and I am a Freshman at Emory College! I'm from Stone Mountain, Georgia, which is a city with an extremely complex and diverse history. This upbringing has led me to care deeply about promoting togetherness as a tool for communal change, which is a mission I advance as a Community Researcher with the Linguistic Justice Collaborative and as a First Year Councilmember. Through the Forum, I hope to be able to learn how to be a better community member through conversations with my classmates!

APRIL CLARK

Year: First

School: Laney Graduate School

Program: Master's in Development Practice (MDP)

Email: april.clark@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hi, my name is April Clark, and I am a first-year graduate student studying Development Practice. I was born and raised in Atlanta and recently graduated from Georgia Tech, where I studied International Affairs, French, and African Studies.

APRIL CLARK CONT'D

I am passionate about contributing to meaningful change and supporting stronger communities. My previous experience includes interning with the Georgia State Senate in constituent services and working with immigrant and refugee communities to promote self-sufficiency. Outside of academics and my professional aspirations, I enjoy reading, cooking, and spending time with my cat.

SAMA ELSHAMSHARY

Year: Sophomore

School: Emory College

Major(s): Human Health with Health Innovation Concentration and Interdisciplinary Studies

Email: sama.elshamshery@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

I am a second year from New York planning to study Human Health with a concentration in health innovation and Interdisciplinary Studies on the Pre-Law track. Outside EASL Forum, I am involved in the IDEAS Fellowship, The Women's Network, Emory Student Ambassadors, Muslim Students Association, and Emory's pre-law fraternity, Kappa Alpha Pi.

My interests center around understanding how lived experiences shape the ways people think, make decisions, form memories, and navigate their lives. I'm especially interested in the intersection of human health, law, and advocacy, mainly the intentionality behind people's choices and how systems, relationships, and communities can better support and protect individuals. In my free time, I enjoys reading anything from novels to poetry and visual art, especially painting.

ISABELLA GUO

Year: Sophomore

School: Emory College

Major(s): Chemistry & Dance

Email: isabella.guo@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hi guys!! I'm Isabella and I'm in my sophomore year studying a double major in chemistry and dance. I love the outdoors and I love finding new food/boba places (so send me recommendations).

Fun fact about me: I don't mind bugs 🐛 🐞

SEAN GUO

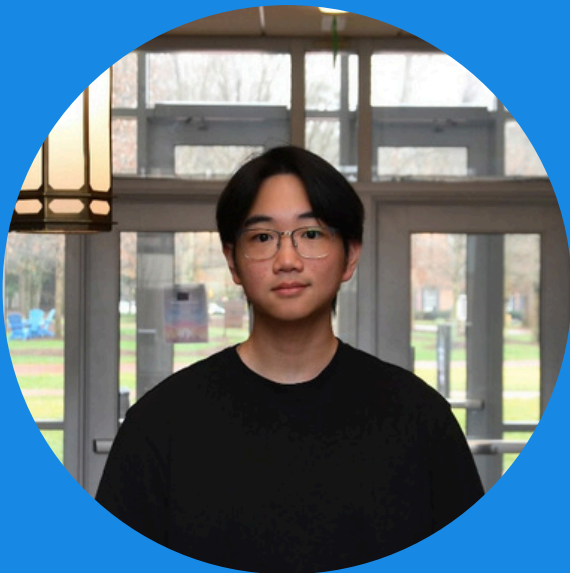

Year: Junior

School: Emory College

Major(s): Philosophy & Data Science, Sociology concentration

Email: sean.guo@emory.edu

Pronouns: he/him

Hey! My name is Sean, and I'm a junior studying Philosophy and Data Science on the pre-law track. On campus, you might find me at fencing practice in the Woodpec or with the Ethics Bowl team. My hobbies include playing piano (badly) and reading.

JON HAMILTON

Year: Second

School: Laney Graduate School

Program: Master's in Development Practice (MDP)

Email: jonathan.hamilton3@emory.edu

Pronouns: he/him

Hi! My name is Jon, and I am a second-year student in the Master's in Development Practice (MDP) program at Laney Graduate School. I'm most interested in the intersection between human livelihoods and nature-based solutions, a passion I developed while serving as an agriculture and environment extension agent with Peace Corps The Gambia from 2022-2024. In the future, I hope to continue doing project-based work that supports communities both domestically and internationally. To that end, I'm excited to participate in the EASL Forum to hear a variety of different perspectives, learn about diverse ethical traditions, and grow as a servant leader!

ALEC HOGBEN

Year: Sophomore

School(s): Emory College

Major(s): Economics and Data Science (PPA track)

Email: alec.hogben@emory.edu

Pronouns: he/him

Hello! I'm big into exercise, especially running and lifting. I like playing music, learning languages and about them, listening to audiobooks and podcasts and being in nature. A few fun goals I have are to learn how to fry scream (so I can sing some Linkin Park), practice bass more consistently, make my Halloween costume, do the 6 steps (breakdancing thing) correctly and maybe do a flip without a trampoline. More seriously I want to one day be able to enact laws and programs to build up infrastructure in developing countries, specifically in the power sector with sustainable energy that small communities can regulate and control themselves.

BLAIN KASSAHUN

Year: Sophomore

School(s): Emory College

Major(s): Anthropology and Human Biology

Minor: Ethics

Email: blain.kassahun@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

My name is Blain, and I am a sophomore majoring in Anthropology and Human Biology with a minor in Ethics on the pre-medical track. I aspire to become a dermatologist, with a particular interest in health equity within dermatology. I am especially passionate about addressing disparities affecting minority communities, including limited representation in medical education, inadequate treatment, and delayed diagnoses regarding skin disorders and diseases. Outside of my professional interest, I serve as an executive member of the Minority Premedical Society, ambassador for Emory's Collegiate Black Christians, and member of Phi Delta Epsilon, a medical fraternity. My hobbies include running, baking, and going on hikes!

PRANATI LAKHANI

Year: Freshman

School(s): Emory College

Major(s): Undecided (pre-med)

Email: pranati.lakhani@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hello! My name is Pranati Lakhani and I am a first-year student at Emory University on the pre-med track. I am passionate about the intersection between medicine and ethics, specifically genetic editing, disability ethics, and autonomy. I joined EASL this year to get exposed to different perspectives on different issues in our society and to use servant leadership skills to truly impact the community. In my free time, I like to read mystery novels, watch movies, listen to music, bike, and make keychains/bracelets.

THEO NENJERAMA

Year: Third

School : Laney Graduate School,
Graduate Division of Religion

Program: Religion, Politics, and
Human Rights

Email:

theophilus.nenjerama@emory.edu

Pronouns: he/him

My name is Theophilus (Theo) Nenjerama. I am a third-year doctoral student in the Graduate Division of Religion (Laney Graduate School).

THEO NENJERAMA CONT'D

I hold a BA Hon in Theatre and Performance (University of Zimbabwe), a Postgraduate Diploma in Education (Zimbabwe Open University), a Master of Divinity, and an MA in Practical Theology (Columbia Theological Seminary). I have experience that spans high school teaching in Zimbabwe, arts-based intercultural advocacy initiatives with migrant communities, and youth work in Ireland. My academic interests broadly examine the intersection of religion, politics, and human rights – with the focus being on how the paradigm of human rights allows the critique and expansion of justice and liberation for various oppressed persons and groups.

SREE PALADUGU

School: Emory College

Major: Data Science

Email: cpaladu@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hi! I'm Sree Paladugu and a first year student at Emory's CAS studying Data Science with a minor in Ethics. I am passionate about pediatrics and bioethics, mainly focusing on adolescent health. On campus, I'm also involved in Emory's Hospice Outreach Program, Undergraduate Medical Review, Phi Delta Epsilon, and Social Impact Consulting. In my free time, I enjoy hiking, trying new foods, and meeting new people!

HEMANI PATEL

School: Emory College

Major(s): Environmental Health & Political Science

Email: hemani.patel@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hello! My name is Hemani Patel, and I am a third-year student at Emory College double majoring in Environmental Health and Mathematics and Political Science while working toward a dual-degree in Mechanical Engineering at Georgia Tech.

I am passionate about developing innovative solutions to environmental justice challenges, particularly those related to sustainability, public health and access to clean water. Through my experiences in environmental research and manufacturing quality assurance, I have become interested in how engineering and innovation can create meaningful real-world impact for communities. I hope to build a career at the intersection of sustainability, technology and most importantly social impact. In my free time, I enjoy watching documentaries, cooking, and discovering new music!

KAUSHIKI RAVI

School: Rollins School of Public Health

Program: Behavioral, Social, & Health Education Sciences

Email: kaushiki.ravi@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hello! My name is Kaushiki Ravi (she/her), and I am a second-year Master of Public Health (MPH) candidate at the Rollins School of Public Health. I was born and raised in India and attended undergrad at Emory, where I earned degrees in neuroscience and psychology.

During my undergraduate years at Emory, I explored my interdisciplinary interests surrounding health education, medical anthropology, and global health through coursework and research experiences. Now, as a public health student, I've been able to deepen my understanding of health issues, social determinants of health impacting outcomes, and how institutions and systems of care can help alleviate some of the burden on populations.

Within public health, I'm passionate about supporting maternal and child health, including sexual and reproductive health, caregiving in global contexts, and early childhood development.

Outside of school, I enjoy dancing, trying new coffee shops, growing my Atlanta restaurant list, practicing yoga, and trying new vegetarian/vegan food recipes.

MICHALA THOMAS

Year: Sophomore

School: Emory College

Major(s): Chemistry & African American Studies

Email: michala.thomas@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hi! My name is Michala Thomas, and I am a sophomore from Boston, MA, studying Chemistry and African American Studies on the pre-MD/PhD track. I am passionate about education and STEM and hope to use both to serve and mentor underserved youth. I currently tutor elementary school students and teach STEM concepts to young learners, experiences that have strengthened my belief in the importance of making education accessible and empowering for every student. When I am not lifting with Emory's Club Weightlifting team or researching chemistry, I love reading, walking, discovering new music, and exploring hidden gems around Atlanta. I am excited to be part of EASL and to learn alongside other students who are passionate about serving their communities!

JACQUELINE THRAILKILL

School: Emory College

Major: Philosophy, Politics, and Law

Minor: Mediterranean Archeology

Year: Senior

Email: jacqueline.thrailkill@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

My name is Jacqueline, and I am a fourth-year undergraduate at Emory University majoring in Philosophy, Politics, and Law with a minor in Ancient Mediterranean Archaeology. My academic interests center on political philosophy and the ancient Mediterranean, particularly ancient Egypt and Middle Egyptian hieroglyphic texts. This semester, I am also excited to be working with Professor Giovanni Lovisetto on his academic podcast, Imago: The World We See.

Outside of Emory, I volunteer with CASA as a child advocate. After graduation, I plan to take a gap year to further explore my interests in archaeology and Egyptology before applying to law school.

In my free time, I enjoy reading, traveling, and spending time with friends and family. I look forward to bringing my interests and experiences to the EASL Forum and learning from the perspectives and experiences of the other members.

KHUSHI VAKTA

Year: Senior

School: Emory College

Major: Human Health & Economics

Email: khushi.vakta@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

I am a senior at Emory University studying Human Health and Economics, and after graduation, I hope to attend medical school. I am especially interested in the ethical questions that arise in healthcare and medicine, including how decisions about access, patient care, and emerging medical technologies can affect individuals and communities. Through EASL, I am excited to deepen my understanding of ethical and servant leadership and explore how these principles can shape the kind of physician and leader I hope to become. I also hope to contribute my experiences in mentorship, service, and healthcare while learning from the perspectives and experiences of others in the Forum.

SHELBY WILLIAMS

Year: First

School(s): Laney Graduate School

Program: Master of Arts in Bioethics

Email: shelby.williams@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

SHELBY WILLIAMS CONT'D

Hi! My name is Shelby Williams, and I'm a first-year master's student in bioethics from Bowling Green, Kentucky. My primary interest within bioethics is clinical ethics. I plan to attend medical school next year after completing my master's and ultimately hope to work as both a physician and clinical ethicist. Outside of school, I enjoy hot yoga, spending time outdoors, and trying new restaurants and coffee shops. I'm also always looking for a good book recommendation or a new group fitness class to try!

CATHERINE YAN

Year: Junior

School: Emory College

Major(s): Philosophy, Politics, & Law

Email: catherine.yan@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hello! My name is Catherine, a junior at Emory College of Arts and Sciences majoring in Philosophy, Politics and Law.

I live in between Shanghai, China and McLean, Virginia. I hope to pursue a J.D. with a focus on antitrust law, competition law, and corporate checks and balances.

Growing up between the US and China and working in equity research and product management this past summer, I spent considerable time reading SEC filings and corporate disclosures – which showed me how businesses get disclosed, scrutinized, and governed depending on different regulatory systems. I'm especially curious about how to ethically regulate emerging technologies like artificial intelligence and robotics.

In my free time, you can find me interior decorating, thrifting, and making arts and crafts!

SOPHIE YU

Year: Junior

School: Emory College

Major: Political Science and Psychology

Email: sophie.yu@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Sophie Yu is a junior at the Emory College of Arts and Sciences, and a double major in Political Science & Psychology. Her experience living in six different cities and moving continents five times is what sparks her interest in intercultural communication and meeting new people. On campus, she is involved with Ben Pius Mock Trial, the Young Democrats of Emory, Kesem at Atlanta, and undergraduate research.

EASL FORUM MENTOR PROGRAM

The EASL Forum peer mentor program is made up of former EASL participants. Mentors help current EASL Forum students maximize their experiences by helping them process their learnings from weekly meetings and guiding them through the development and delivery of their service project.

As an EASL peer mentor, students...

- Strengthen their individual integrity by serving as a role model for participants and holding each student and other mentors accountable.
- Grow their ability to lead others by building a mentoring framework and managing multiple personalities to ensure a meaningful experience.
- Reflect and evaluate their awareness and responsiveness managing conflict and creating solutions within their mentoring group.
- Develop greater engagement with the program, Center for Ethics, Emory as a whole, and Atlanta by leading the way for participants to fully immerse themselves in their communities.

2026 - 2027 PEER MENTORS

Malina Gadsden	Anthony Mensah	Kaleigh Tolliver
Nashra Kahn	Avery Neuer
Eliana Liporace	Emma Raman

MALINA GADSDEN

Year: Junior

Years Participated in EASL: Three

School: Emory College

Major(s): Psychology

Email: malina.gadsden@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

My name is Malina Gadsden. I'm from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and I'm a junior and QuestBridge Scholar at Emory. I'm majoring in Psychology (B.S.) with a minor in Ethics and hope to apply to an MD/MPH dual degree program post-graduation. I'm interested in exploring the intersectionality of health, law, and education. I'm a Peer Health Partner (PHP) for the Center for the Study of Human Health, where I lecture and facilitate discussions and activities surrounding a variety of topics in health and wellbeing. I connect students to campus resources and serve as a guide for navigating college life socially, emotionally, professionally, and academically. I also have a strong love for advocacy as I compete for Emory Mock Trial and have lobbied for mental health and firearm-related bills.

NASHRA KAHN

Year: Junior

Years Participated in EASL: Two

School(s): Emory College

Major(s): Interdisciplinary Studies

Email: nashra.kahn@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hi! I'm Nashra Khan, a third-year student at Emory University passionate about the intersection of medicine, law, and public policy. I plan to pursue advocate for human rights and equitable healthcare within correctional and immigrant communities. I'm deeply involved in immigration reform efforts, including my work with Behind the Glass, which amplifies the voices of detained immigrants. My current research and thesis explore healthcare conditions in ICE detention centers and the ethical frameworks that shape treatment access and accountability. Through this work, I hope to bridge my interests in medicine, law, and ethics to create more humane systems of care for vulnerable populations.

ELIANA LIPORACE

Year: Senior

Years Participated in EASL: Four

School(s): Emory College

Major(s): Neuroscience & Behavioral Biology

Minor: Community Building & Social Change

Email: eliana.liporace@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

As a peer mentor in the EASL Forum, I've been shaped by its core values of integrity, bridge building, and community engagement. Having started as a scholar and later served as a mentor, I've deepened my understanding of servant leadership and ethical advocacy in addressing health disparities. My work with Global Growers Network and my presentation on climate risk strengthened my commitment to examining how climate change impacts health, especially in vulnerable communities. EASL continues to guide my path toward an MD/PhD focused on neurodegenerative disease through the lens of environmental justice and climate resilience. The program's emphasis on ethical leadership and community-based research has grounded my goal of connecting science, policy, and practice to build healthier, more equitable communities.

ANTHONY MENSAH

Year: Second

Years Participated in EASL: Two

School(s): Laney Graduate School

Program: Religion

Email: anthony.mensah@emory.edu

Pronouns: he/him

A second-year PhD student at Laney Graduate School, Emory University, I am researching African Indigenous Medicine and its complementarity with orthodox medical care. I have always believed that indigenous healthcare approaches play an important role in the health and well-being of indigenous peoples and communities. I was a part of the Ethics and Servant Leadership programme cohort for the 2025/2026 academic year, and it has been an interesting experience. I also participated in the EASL Summer Internship programme with the International Rescue Committee (IRC) in Atlanta as a Supply Chain Intern. I hope to make a significant contribution to the IRC's mission of helping individuals with shattered lives and livelihoods to survive, recover, and regain control of their future by delivering dedicated service to the organisation, paying attention to the smallest details, and leveraging my teaching skills and competencies to foster hope among those impacted by conflict and disaster. Such is my personal commitment to humanity.

AVERY NEUER

Year: Senior

Years Participated in EASL: Three

School(s): Emory College

Major(s): Philosophy, Politics, & Law (PPL)

Minor: Ethics

Email: avery.neuer@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

I'm a senior studying Philosophy, Politics, and Law and minoring in Ethics. I plan to attend law school next fall to pursue a career in criminal defense. If I'm not reading or studying, I love to spend time outdoors, bake treats, and paint.

EMMA RAMAN

Year: Junior

Years Participated in EASL: Two

School(s): Emory College

Major(s): Philosophy, Politics, & Law and Sociology

Email: emma.raman@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

Hello! My name is Emma Raman, and I'm a junior at Emory University double majoring in Sociology and Philosophy, Politics, and Law. I participated in the EASL Forum during my sophomore year in partnership with Georgia Public Broadcasting and am a peer mentor this semester!

This past summer, I interned as a Campaign Fellow for Nithya Raman for Los Angeles City Council. I assisted with canvassing and phone banking, communicating policy priorities, and encouraging civic participation throughout Los Angeles communities.

On campus, I am the Advocacy and Education Chair for the Emory Justice and Law Initiative. I am passionate about education and research + plan to pursue a PHD after graduation. I am particularly interested in how systems of privilege, identity, and power shape both perception and opportunity.

Outside of academics, I love dancing, writing poetry, eating food of all cuisines, and being out in nature whenever I can. I'm so excited to be a Peer Mentor for the EASL Forum this year and learn from new participants who are interested in leadership, justice, ethics, and community.

KALEIGH TOLLIVER

Year: Senior

Years Participated in EASL: Three

School: Emory College

Major(s): Philosophy, Politics, & Law (PPL) and Psychology

Email: kaleigh.tolliver@emory.edu

Pronouns: she/her

I am Kaleigh Tolliver, a senior at Emory College of Arts & Sciences studying PPL (philosophy, politics, & law) and Psychology. I am originally from a small, close-knit community in West Virginia. I have been passionate about service since childhood, seeing the passion my grandparents expressed as servant leaders in our community. This and my experience in an introductory ethics course here at Emory inspired my participation in EASL. I have learned so much during my three years in this program. Since my experience in the EASL Summer Internship Program, I have decided to take a gap year and find an opportunity to work in advocacy or the non-profit sector. After taking some time to figure things out, I plan to attend law school and focus on civil and human rights. But for now, outside of my coursework, I am busy being part of the Emory Autism Advocacy Organization executive board and trying to meet my yearly reading goal.

2027 EASL COMMUNITY PARTNERS

Each year, EASL Forum students engage with the community by working on projects with partner organizations during the spring semester. Students will identify the needs of a community partner and build an informed action plan for a project to address that need, with long-term goals for success and sustainability. They will then implement the project, presenting the results and what they learned throughout the process at a year end celebration.

BAGEL RESCUE

Website: www.bagelrescue.com

A bagel is so much more than just a bagel...

Food is our most basic need and EVERYONE deserves to eat. While bagels won't sustain a full diet, they are an easily transportable, fresh food that offer nutrition, deliciousness, and dignity to those in need.

At Bagel Rescue, we believe food should not be wasted when it can be put to good use feeding our community. Bagel Rescue on our mission to break the cycle of waste and pain and create a cycle of hope and kindness.

THE BAKERY ATLANTA

Website: www.thebakeryatlanta.com/

The mission of The Bakery Atlanta is to broaden awareness of, and build community around, progressive ideas in the arts. We envision an Atlanta that supports the emerging, DIY, and underground arts as they grow locally and regionally in the Southeast.

The Bakery Atlanta is a collective of artists, curators, and administrators dedicated to offering alternative models to local creatives and the general public. We host and produce experiences that connect and inspire people through collaboration, experimentation, and play.

Moreover, we support the emerging, DIY arts community through community projects and engagement events, hosting workshops, classes, art exhibitions, and offering a host of digital resources for artists including our artists opportunities page and artist directory. In addition to these offerings, we also coordinate, curate, and install artwork in public and private spaces.

CONCRETE JUNGLE

Website: www.concrete-jungle.org

Concrete Jungle was started by a group of friends scavenging for overlooked apple trees in Atlanta. Thus, Concrete Jungle became an organization whose mission is to forage, farm, and support food access across Georgia.

Concrete Jungle provides fresh produce to food-insecure families by distributing excess produce from fruit trees and farms throughout the region; growing food on our farm; and providing nutrition education resources. As of December 2023, Concrete Jungle had distributed over 2 million pounds of fresh, nutritious food.

Concrete Jungle's main programs include its flagship program, Fruit Picks and Adventure Picks, PEEL (Produce Education and Enjoyment Loop), and Produce Buyers Club.

RETAAZA

Website: www.retaaza.com

Retaaza is a B Corp and social enterprise that strives to make local food more accessible and affordable by directly supporting our communities' farmers, reconnecting consumers to their food, and feeding families struggling with food insecurity.

Retaaza is also certified by the Women's Business Enterprise National Council (WBENC) and Small Business Administration (SBA) as a Women-Owned Small Business.

Retaaza has created a holistic, hyper local food system that ensures all stakeholders are treated fairly and with dignity. We bring food security, economic stability, and ease of access to fresh local produce to urban and rural communities, securing a healthier, more sustainable, and equitable future for diverse stakeholders across Georgia.

RONALD MCDONALD HOUSE ATLANTA

Website: www.ronaldmcdonaldhouseatl.org

Since 1979, Ronald McDonald House Atlanta has provided comfort and care to families when they needed it most.

The mission of Ronald McDonald House Atlanta is to provide essential services that remove barriers, strengthen families, and promote healing when ill or injured children need healthcare. We do this by helping families stay close to their child – and to one another – through every step of their healthcare journey. At Ronald McDonald House Atlanta, we envision a world where every family has what they need to ensure the best health outcomes for their children.

The Atlanta area McDonald's restaurants and owner/operators provide unwavering support in our efforts to give children support, stability and the best medicine of all – their families by their side.
