Exemplars are those deemed worthy to copy or emulate. Experts are skilled, practiced, tested, and proven reliable. According to your tradition, who is an exemplar, and who an expert? What qualities are necessary and/or sufficient to be one or the other or both? To what degree and in which ways can and should community members strive to be an exemplar and/or expert? What happens when an exemplar or expert goes astray, transgresses a tradition's core commitment? According to your tradition, how are exceptional people held accountable, in theory and in practice? Where are the limits to the esteem these people are given?
