

THE WAY THINGS FELT

SYNAESTHESIA, AUTISM, AND ART

with special guest

Megan Craig, PhD

Stony Brook University

Thurs, Feb 20, 2025

7:00 pm

Center for Ethics, Room 102
1531 Dickey Drive, Atlanta, GA
30322

Artist, essayist, and philosopher Megan Craig will discuss her 2016 multi-media, participatory installation, The Way Things Felt. The work, supported in part by the National Endowment for the Arts, intersects with Craig's ongoing research into embodiment, sensation, color, synesthesia, and autism. Working together with individuals from Chappel Haven, a school and transition program in West Haven, Connecticut that serves over 250 adults with a variety of abilities and needs, Craig collaborated with a range of community members to create a public work that could be welcoming for all. Craig will share thoughts about the development of The Way Things Felt, aspects of her research into color and synesthesia, talk about the relationship between synesthesia and autism, and discuss the challenges of creating meaningfully inclusive public, participatory installations.

For more information please contact Alison Kear
akear@emory.edu

Free - Open to Public Registration Required

